Schenck, Price, Smith & King LLP Partner Quoted On National Media Platform

~Tanya N. Helfand Speaks on Postnuptial Agreements~

Tanya N. Helfand, Partner, Schenck, Price, Smith & King LLP was recently quoted in “U.S. News & World Report”. The article, “Do You Need a Postnuptial Agreement?”, discussed the various intricacies of postnups.

A postnuptial agreement is a legally binding contract that restructures marital property rights. It is an opportunity to determine how assets and liabilities will be handled in the event of divorce or death. Postnups and prenups differ in timing, with the former occurring post-marriage and the latter occurring pre-marriage. Postnups can also address new financial matters that occur during the marriage.

Helfand discussed the pros and cons of postnuptial agreements. “Fears and issues come up for both parties. At the same time, a properly negotiated fair agreement after honest discussion and consideration and clear advice of counsel is a great tool for couples to understand feelings and concerns of the other party, which I believe can bring them closer.”

John E. Ursin, Managing Partner of SPSK, commented that the firm was pleased to see one of our attorneys quoted in such a widely read publication on a complicated, cutting edge topic.
